CHASE'S THEATER STARTS SEASON

House Has Been Refitted During Summer.

"Why Girls Leave Home" at the Academy-The Kentucky Belles at Lyceum.

Chase's Theater opened its doors for the season yesterday and entertained two large audiences with a polite vaudeville bill of excellent quality. Patrons who visited the house commented favorably on the renovating that had taken place during the summer.

Not only has the interior of the house been thoroughly cleaned, but the upper portions have been newly-decorated and furnished, and now equal in appointments the foyers on the lower floor. Mandsome carpets adorn the floors and the ceilings are bright and resplendent with fresh decorations.

Morton and Elliott, who opened the bill, made paper tearing a feature of their act. By doing the mechanical part of their work while singing, they avoided the rather tiresome details and secured an excellent effect when they displayed paper mat of elaborate design and in the ther two varieties of paper ladders. Louise Agoust, of the Agoust Family, Louise Agoust, of the Agoust Family, which made a sensation in vaudeville several seasons ago, was the leading feature of a juggling act in which the comedy was provided by Charles H. Weston. This consisted principally of smashing all the crockery on the stage with a nammer. Miss Agoust ended the "turn" with a plate catching feat which was lone with such hurricane effect by the riginal family.

Vera King is a monologist, whose attractive personality is fortified by fair ability as a story-teller and singer of "coon" songs. The act by Lew Bloom and Jane Cooper called "A Picture From Life," in which Bloom played a tramp and Miss Cooper a New England spinster, was a trifle slow in getting under way, but thoroughly entertaining after a needless introduction had been fired at the audience. Bloom's stories and songs were in the main good, and an eccentric dance made a strong finale.

Keno, Walsh and Melrose, acrobats, had a number of brand-new feats. A head balancing combination, in which the three formed an arch, climbing ladder and going through various maneuvers, had the advantage of being a novelty in which the element of suspense was excellently sustained. Most acrobatic feats suffer in effect from being over too quick, but this one lasted long enough to give the audience a chance to study its mechanics.

Frank Bush unfolded an amusing bunch of character stories, most of which were fresh, and Jewell's automatic electric theater proved a striking mechanical exhibition. The movements which were fresh, and sewen's adormatic electric theater proved a striking mechanical exhibition. The movements of the automatons were exceedingly varied and lifelike, while some of the second electric fairly squaled the elaborate equipments of many modern spec-
